edit if you decide to focus more on you.

Non-Fiction — Ritt copy

Question: the narrator doesn't appear here again. Do you need him?

Pierre Labib

Professor Ritt

English 241 H - HW

04-28-2019

Culture Shock Experience

This is telling... can you show us any of this?

Bob is young enthusiastic young man who loves swimming and partying. He is very social and everyone loves to be associated with him. Every time we have some work to do in groups, I fight my way to be in the same group with him. We refer to him as the King of adventure. He always has a sense of humor and he is naturally charismatic. Well, this does not merely come from daily jokes that he normally entertains us with but from the story everyone knows about him. His life so far is like a movie script. Bob has an amazing past which is built from a humble background and migration into the United States when he could barely utter an English word.

Bob was born and raised in Dubai and coming to America was mainly facilitated by demand and thirst for education. He tells his story with a lot of humor. His home country is prestigious. Dubai boasts of countable unique and prestigious attractions that the whole world takes notice of. The work ethic is professionally modeled to utilize intellects and duly award them. The country's domestic and international relations stand out in the entire world.

Workshop comments in blue:

- Good details! Can we hear scenes - let your character do things. Slow down + let us in.
- We'd like to see more this?
- More on culture of Dubai?

This is the reason for the increased influx of immigrants and foreign investors who work majorly with the private sector to not only benefit the employer but also improve their personal and professional life. With all these recommendable facts, nevertheless Bob found a gap that he could only fill by coming to America.

He recalls the chilly morning of January 17th, 2017, when he bid his family goodbye. Eventually, he would come to the United States of America. This was a long-waited moment. His flight took off around 0245 hours and for countable hours, he was on air trying to feel new breezes as they trespassed various countries, mountains and valleys. Cutting through the clouds was something he had previously experienced, but on this particular moment, it was different. This marked the beginning of his disorientation. Most of his international journeys, he had travelled with his parents, but he was alone in this one. The passenger seated next to him, James, was an American white, but unfortunately, they could not communicate well apart from just telling each other names. Language barrier stood between them. Example editing this

He expected to board along with nationals conversant with Arabic language so that they could bond during the journey. He was still a learner of the English Language and could not speak or even understand the American ascent. James too could not comprehend Arabic so gestures significantly complemented cases that verbal communication failed. That was the mystery in his journey. He arrived safe and settled down for his academics that had compelled him to come to the United States of America. Before embarking on his academic program, he had to solve one major challenge. 'He had to make his life bearable here.'

Scene here?

Why does he expect this? People from all over come to Dubai, don't they?