

November 24 2020

Strategies to Address Student Bullying

In the contemporary world, one of the most dominant and prevailing concerns is the bullying. Bullying is considered to be an unethical act and principle in which one person shows or imposes his power on to the other person. In this world, it is a common fact that the person with high power and authority always tries to suppress the powerless and innocent person. This has become a global issue and is affecting the life of the people. In other words, we can say that bullying has become a trend and it is becoming more common in schools and public places. The new coming students in the school are always bullied by the older students which shatter their buoyancy and confidence level. In other terms, bullying is given the name of ragging and fun.

Children say that they are teasing the new students just for fun and enjoyment, however, some students take this act on their heart and always remain frightened. Moreover, they lose all their confidence to speak at the public level or within the classrooms. Such students never participate in the class activities and always remain silent as they have developed the sense that if they will talk, the other students will laugh and bully him (Klein). Through the act of bullying, the victim goes into the state of psychological depression and mental distress. In most of the cases, the bullied students try to attempt suicide because they think that they are useless and cannot do anything to maintain their self-respect and self-esteem. This is one of the biggest dilemmas of the 21st century that needs to be addressed and resolved.

Whose position is this? Who's doing the considering?

Always? Be wary of unprovable blanket statements.

You'll need a clear thesis statement at some point early on that argues why your solution is the most economically and/or legislatively and/or socially feasible.

In most cases? I'm not sure that's really true, even if it's a startling and too-common occurrence. What are the real statistics on this?

How should it be addressed and solved?

As the trend line of bullying is increasing, the cases of depression and anxiety have also reached another level. People think that bullying is nothing serious but an act of enjoyment, however, it has just elevated the level of mental stress. These problems need to be solved as soon as possible but before that it needs to be addressed. There are several ways in which the detrimental effects of these problems can be conveyed to the world. The most prominent strategy is the education and public awareness among the people. If the initiative is taken to stop the bullying within the school premises, then there are increased chances that this problem can be solved. In school, every child should be given the awareness about the concept of bullying, how it originated and how it is affecting the life of innocent children. Students should be given the information about the correct bullying definition. They think that bullying is another name of fun and entertainment, however, sometimes it takes the level of aggressiveness (Cross). In this education strategy, different individuals are taught that every act that hurts the feeling of the other person and shatters their feeling comes into the zone of bullying. Therefore, clear information and understanding about bullying plays a significant role in addressing the problem. Apart from education on school level, public awareness also plays a pivotal part as it will help the people in knowing more about bullying and their detrimental effects.

Bullying occurs mostly in the high-level schools and it is most difficult for everyone to bear it and even to those who are doing it. So there is a need to implement bullying prevention policy in all the schools of the United Nation that helps in addressing and solving the problem. Bullying is actually now becoming a common practice that kids normally target immigrant classmates on the basis of their social statuses and differences in culture. The purpose of this policy is to give awareness of the present problem and then directing the consequences. It is effective because by giving awareness you are going to stop this process for the next time. The

This is the first time this paper has proposed a solution. I would recommend doing this earlier in the paper.

How would this awareness campaign be implemented? What would it cost? Would Congress need to be involved? What form does it take?

Might public awareness be an altogether different issue from student education? Might it merit its own paragraph?

According to whom?

What policy?

that can help the children from bullying is to motivate them for activities of their interest, hobbies and that increases their confidence, helps them to make more friends and also helps them when they are bullied (Bowes).

From my perspective, the best strategy that would prove effective in addressing the concern of bullying is a bullying prevention program. The main objective of this program is to make the world aware of what bullying is and how it is taking the lives of innocent people. This program would help in telling the difference between bullying and enjoyment. Hurting someone with the harsh words or staring at someone with a strange gaze is also included in bullying as the other person gets affected by such things. Therefore, a public platform is required for addressing such issues so that every person including students, doctors, teachers and parents. If the parent knows about the bullying, then they can help their children in maintaining their confidence. Similarly, a clinically depressed child from school bullying can be treated by doctors. So, the discussion of bullying on every level should be made so that every person helps the students to refrain from such activities. Only in this way, a healthy environment can be promoted where every person has the liberty to live their life to the fullest without shattering their confidence level and taking stress on their heads.

The steps that can be taken in future to address and resolve this issue is to take action immediately once the victim makes a complaint against the person. There is another stigma in this society that the organization responsible for controlling and preventing bullies never take the complaints of the victims seriously. They always turned them back by saying that will look into the case, but that time never comes. Therefore, such organizations should be dismissed and new systems should be enforced that take immediate action and increase the confidence of the victimized student. Second step that can be taken is to inform the students and instructors of the

How is parental behavior going to be changed? What actual steps could be implemented and legitimately tracked to ensure that this happens? Or might you argue that this

Why is it the best? This should be the main focus of the paper (and you should foreground your solution in your thesis statement), but it's not really made clear how economically

Reply

How would an anti-bullying campaign be implemented? What are the costs? Is Congressional action needed? Why is this the best strategy?

that can help the children from bullying is to motivate them for activities of their interest, hobbies and that increases their confidence, helps them to make more friends and also helps them when they are bullied (Bowes).

From my perspective, the best strategy that would prove effective in addressing the concern of bullying is a bullying prevention program. The main objective of this program is to make the world aware of what bullying is and how it is taking the lives of innocent people. This program would help in telling the difference between bullying and enjoyment. Hurting someone with the harsh words or staring at someone with a strange gaze is also included in bullying as the other person gets affected by such things. Therefore, a public platform is required for addressing such issues so that every person including students, doctors, teachers and parents. If the parent knows about the bullying, then they can help their children in maintaining their confidence. Similarly, a clinically depressed child from school bullying can be treated by doctors. So, the discussion of bullying on every level should be made so that every person helps the students to refrain from such activities. Only in this way, a healthy environment can be promoted where every person has the liberty to live their life to the fullest without shattering their confidence level and taking stress on their heads.

The steps that can be taken in future to address and resolve this issue is to take action immediately once the victim makes a complaint against the person. There is another stigma in this society that the organization responsible for controlling and preventing bullies never take the complaints of the victims seriously. They always turned them back by saying that will look into the case, but that time never comes. Therefore, such organizations should be dismissed and new systems should be enforced that take immediate action and increase the confidence of the victimized student. Second step that can be taken is to inform the students and instructors of the tracked to ensure that this happens? Or might you argue that this solutions isn't good precisely because it is much more hard to track? [...]

Reply

Why is it the best? This should be the main focus of the paper (and you should foreground your solution in your thesis statement), but it's not really made clear how economic [...]

How would an anti-bullying campaign be implemented? What are the costs? Is Congressional action needed? Why is this the best strategy?

programs that are based on punishment are not effective instead it increases the chances of bullying when all the responsibility is placed on the children level. This policy also focuses on the climate of school because a positive school climate promotes healthy development while negative climate increases the aggression in students. The positive climate mainly includes mostly those feelings of having power and how to express it and use of media. Social norm engineering is a method of development of positive culture among the fellow students and reduces the chances of bullying. When they know that to live a healthy life everyone should give respect first and then expect to take it back from society. This needs to be addressed not only in schools but also in a society. Teachers also play an important role for implementation of this policy because teachers should be prepared properly to deal with every type of bullying (Bonell).

Parents and caretakers also play an important role in addressing the issue of bullying and controlling it by using different practices. Aggression is the most common problem that is present in young children. It should be addressed carefully by motivating the behaviors of sharing things with each other, helping someone and also solving the problem of others. Parents having warm behavior and proper communication with children reduces the chances of bullying. There should be a clear communication between parents and children about the bullying. It helps them to understand that it is harmful for everyone and if they face such a situation then how to respond properly. Parents should teach children to say 'STOP' or 'walk away' in such situations and also help others if they are in such a situation by speaking up or seek help from the adults. Children mostly learn by the behavior of their parents. If there are problems present in the family environment then it leads to bullying. So parents should learn not to expose any problems in front of children (Hanish). Parents should also show an authoritative behavior that means giving freedom to their children but within certain limits also reduces the risk. The most important point

According to whom?

What is this paragraph saying that is different from the paragraph before it? I'm unclear about the main idea of this paragraph.

student. If the educational institutes keep this information only to themselves and show negligence in taking actions against the culprit, then it ultimately leads to the worsening of the condition. The culprits will get more courage and they will be indulged more in such activities and also take joy in committing such unethical and immoral acts. Another step that contributes towards solving this issue is the counseling of the students. The students should be given enough confidence and courage that they take everything in a lighter mode. In most of the cases, the victims do not even utter a word from their mouth due to the reason that the dominant and high authoritative person will provide him harm and this drops their confidence level. If the students are given proper advice on how to tackle such a situation, then there is no chance that they take this stupidest act so seriously and impose it on their brains. In my opinion, counseling plays a significant role in addressing as well as solving the problem.

Cyberbullying and other initiation programs should be taken more seriously. They should keep all the records and data of previous bullying and take strict actions against it. If the organizations of cyberbullying show carelessness and negligence in their actions, then the problem of bullying can never be resolved and it will further. Therefore, strict actions should be taken against those who are involved in such acts. On the other hand, the educational institutes should make rules and regulations and take strict actions against those students who try to bully and hurt others (Limber).

From the whole debate, it is concluded that bullying has become a global concern and is leading to traumatize children. It is a common fact that every individual has different thinking ability and takes things differently. Some people take bullying actions of others in a lighter mode whereas some students take it seriously which affects their mental health and leads to psychological distress. Not only students are involved in bullying, some teachers also exhibit the

How would you cause schools to take accusations more seriously? What steps would need to be taken? Is this a part of the anti-bullying campaign, or is this a new [...]

This paragraph begins by talking about taking accusations seriously and ends by talking about counseling. These are two distinct ideas and deserve their own, [...]

What rules? What actions should be taken? How much will it cost?

student. If the educational institutes keep this information only to themselves and show negligence in taking actions against the culprit, then it ultimately leads to the worsening of the condition. The culprits will get more courage and they will be indulged more in such activities and also take joy in committing such unethical and immoral acts. Another step that contributes towards solving this issue is the counseling of the students. The students should be given enough confidence and courage that they take everything in a lighter mode. In most of the cases, the victims do not even utter a word from their mouth due to the reason that the dominant and high authoritative person will provide him harm and this drops their confidence level. If the students are given proper advice on how to tackle such a situation, then there is no chance that they take this stupidest act so seriously and impose it on their brains. In my opinion, counseling plays a significant role in addressing as well as solving the problem.

Cyberbullying and other initiation programs should be taken more seriously. They should keep all the records and data of previous bullying and take strict actions against it. If the organizations of cyberbullying show carelessness and negligence in their actions, then the problem of bullying can never be resolved and it will further. Therefore, strict actions should be taken against those who are involved in such acts. On the other hand, the educational institutes should make rules and regulations and take strict actions against those students who try to bully and hurt others (Limber).

From the whole debate, it is concluded that bullying has become a global concern and is leading to traumatize children. It is a common fact that every individual has different thinking ability and takes things differently. Some people take bullying actions of others in a lighter mode whereas some students take it seriously which affects their mental health and leads to psychological distress. Not only students are involved in bullying, some teachers also exhibit the

How would you cause schools to take accusations more seriously? What steps would need to be taken? Is this a part of the anti-bullying campaign, or is this a new about taking accusations seriously and ends by talking about counseling. These are two distinct ideas and deserve their own, researched discussions.

Reply

What rules? What actions should be taken? How much will it cost?

characteristics of bullying. For instance, if a student fails an exam in the class and the teacher taunts him throughout the session that he is unable to do anything and is useless, then this behavior of the teacher is also counted as bullying. The instructor instead of giving him courage that he can do best in his next exam, taunts him that takes away all the courage and confidence from the student and makes him think like a useless person.

To bully someone is not a right choice to make. It does not fall in the fun part of our daily routine. A person has no right to bully anyone. Society has experienced devastating effects of bullying. Data showed that bullying shakes the confidence of a person. It is the issue which is costing lives. Many suicides cases have been reported due to bullying. It is necessary to teach children at an early age that bullying is not a healthy thing. They should realize that so called fun acts might shatter the life of a person. It does not only affect a person but also its family suffers. Through education and proper awareness bullying in schools or colleges etc. can be prevented. Nowadays a day's new type of bullying appears that is cyber bullying. Even Hollywood stars face trolling on their minor mistakes. To control cyber bullying, it is necessary that social media forums like YouTube, twitter and Instagram discourage the concept of trolling. These media sites should develop proper departments which tackle such issues on a daily basis. These sites should suspend the social media accounts of people who bully others. It is the responsibility of the whole society to unite against the concept of bullying because only society can tackle it effectively as this issue is difficult to detect through scientific technologies. Discouragement of bullying shows that a society is mature enough and they give respect to each other, they allow people to live their life as they want.

What should be done about this?
The sixth page of the paper is too late to be spending time still defining bullying; instead, the focus by this point should be on specific action.

