

4. Have the significance of developmental tasks, stages of growth toward a mature personality, and the development of morality been considered when planning the curriculum?
5. Does the curriculum attempt to provide for earlier tasks that are inadequately achieved and for their maintenance when they are successfully achieved?
6. Does the curriculum reflect social and cultural changes that have occurred in recent years at each stage of human development?

REFERENCES

- Comer, J. P. (2001). Schools that develop children. The American Prospect, 12(7), 30-35.
- Epstein, H. T. (1978). Growth spurts during brain development: Implications for educational policy and practice. In J. S. Chall & A. F. Mirsky (Eds.), Education and the brain: The 77th yearbook of the National Society for the Study of Education, Part II. Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press.
- Epstein, H. T. (1990). Stages in human mental growth. Journal of Educational Psychology, 82(4), 876-880.
- Erikson, E. H., & Erikson, J. M. (1997). The life cycle completed: Extended version with new chapters on the ninth stage of development by Joan M. Erikson. New York, NY: W. W. Norton & Company.