Nice ideas but I have a major concern. You need to bring in a business perspective. You don't need to develop a technical solution but you must demonstrate that a business or industry plays a significant role to solving the problem.

Bring in a (or two) theories/frameworks from our readings to help organize thoughts, evaluations & recommendations. Alternatively, you can bring in some other theories from outside readings. Industrial ecology and or co-location of energy users will better allow the output from one process become the input for another neighbor.

Also, you might consider just one application for the biogas idea (eg landlords).
