Backflow Prevention

Backflow Prevention Device Installation

Backflow is the flow of water in a reverse direction. This can be especially troublesome for plumbing systems dealing with sewage or contaminated waste water. Federal law requires the installation of a backflow prevention device in situations where backflow is possible. This would include backflow from irrigation systems, fire supply lines, beverage machines, sewer lines, and more. These devices must also be tested at least once per year by a professional plumber.

Gauge Construction, Inc.

We provide backflow prevention devices for industrial plant managers, government facilities, commercial operations, maintenance providers, and private residences as well.

Backflow Prevention Device Testing

Your backflow prevention device is mechanical device, they can degrade and break-down over time. Inside the backflow preventer, there are internal seals, springs, and other moving parts that can wear with constant use. In order to remain compliant, your backflow prevention device must be tested to ensure that it is doing it's job. A backflow device that isn't working correctly runs the risk of contaminating your potable water supplies and creating situations where contaminated water can cause a health risk.

Using properly calibrated equipment we can test your backflow prevention devices to ensure compliance and we can repair or replace backflow prevention devices as needed. We offer backflow prevention testing on all types of approved devices.

In the event of heavy rainfall, or accidental flooding, your below ground basement is at risk of water intrusion. A properly installed and working sump pump will keep your basement free of excess water and prevent costly damage to your building contents and even worse the foundation of your structure. Not everybody needs a sump pump installed but we can definitely help those that do.

Gas Lines

We can run gas lines and service or install gas appliances.

Using gas for heat and energy in your home or building is now a common service most property owners are familiar with. With Natural Gas being readily available, the energy it can generate is very affordable.

Natural Gas is becoming more and more common in both home remodeling projects and new construction as well when the opportunity to convert to less expensive energy is available.

Gauge Construction, Inc

~~The Plumbers Connection~~ employs experienced, and fully certified Gas Fitting and Plumbing technicians. It's quite common for contractors in other trades to NOT do any type gas hookups or disconnects for safety and liability reasons so a certified master plumber or gas fitter is often a required part of the job. Many solutions can be provided in only a day or two and we always provide same day service so it won't be "the gas fitter" that holds up your project.

Gas Fitting/Piping Services We Provide:
