

School Shooting and Prevention

Most recently, seventeen people were killed while a similar number were left nursing serious injuries after a school shooting incident took place in a high school in Parkland, Florida. Eyewitnesses identified the 19-year old Nikolas Cruz as the responsible criminal (Ray Sanchez N(p)). Although Cruz confessed, the police and the prosecutors have not yet given the motive behind the shooting because they are still investigating patterns of disciplinary issues as well as any unnerving behavior. I am concerned with the events of the Florida school shooting incident because I have school going children who are the potential victims of such criminal activities. It is evident that random cases of school shooting violence have been spreading across the US undetected, and no one is protected if immediate solutions are not implemented. Effective solutions to school shooting can only be achieved if the relevant authorities can address the prevalence of bullying as an underlying factor and implement various strategies to limit the rate of shootings in school shooting incidents.

Although most states in the US have implemented various antibullying legislation, most of the laws implemented are less effective. The schools that continue giving room for bullying to take place should be held responsible. Any school that does not intervene to stop the vice from escalating should face tough sanctions (How To Prevent School Shootings - The Boston Globe N(p)). It is unfortunate that few individuals were victimized in the past years when most schools
