

painful and disappointing if it remains unresolved. He had to constantly acknowledge that the feeling is normal, keep in touch with friends and relatives at home, seek psychological counseling and believe in himself as he focused on his ambitions. When tackled properly, one can change the attitude. Today he appreciates the beauty and diversity exhibited in the American way of life as he stays true to his native values and culture. Everyone loves him because of the humor he uses to tell his story. He is equally a hard worker in class and he has managed to live his best life here.

Do you need
to tell us
all this at the end? or
can you put
some of his friends?
