Thesis Statement

Gender roles are a contemporary issue that has been there for centuries; puzzle generations have failed to unravel. In the short story, "Story of an Hour" by Kate Chopin, the theme of gender roles is well-elaborated with clear illustrations from the characters. Chopin explores 19th-century gender roles through the character of Mrs. Mallard. Mrs. Mallard is depicted as the symbol of oppression in marriage, which points out to the whole issue of inequality. Secondly, she points out the lack of economic and social equity, which leaves them powerless and weak in the community's eye.

This article will look into gender roles in the short story "The story of an Hour" by Kate Chopin. The main question under discussion will be the differences that arise between these two roles, and whether both men and women have equal rights. Gender expectations will also major where I will delve into what the short story's characters are fighting against. Kate Chopin's Short story is only a mirage of our society today. All over the world, male chauvinism issues, gender inequality, feminism, and women empowerment are the most trending. We have still not come to a logical conclusion on these issues.
