

Leg 500 Law, Ethics and Corporate Governance

Subscribe

112 Post(s) in this Thread

110 Unread

Search Thread Refresh

Select: All None

Message Actions Expand All Collapse All

Anonymous posted 1 month ago (last edited 5 days ago) Overall Rating:

Week 1 Discussion

- Discuss the following:
- Unethical conduct is not necessarily illegal conduct, and the difference between ethical and unethical conduct can be difficult to spot. Using the Internet, identify an example within the last year of a company engaging in legal but arguably unethical conduct. Determine two reasons why this conduct could be deemed unethical and why you believe the company failed to make the right decision. Provide your sources for information. Please use a company NO ONE has already written on.
 - When it comes to legal conduct, where are laws found and what is the purpose of law identified in the chapter reading? Which do you most agree with? If running a business, where should a business executive look to find and understand the law that governs their business?
 - Remember to include your sources and links for your research and answers.

Reply Quote

LORI BAGGOT FROM THE PROFESSOR... Overall Rating: 6 days ago

Dear Graduate Students: Good morning, welcome to Week 1 of LEG500. I think this is such an important class for all of you earning your Master's Degree and seeking a management or executive position one day. If you are already in a management position, I hope that this class helps you to understand some valuable legal information and its application to the workplace. Please be sure to share your experiences in your present positions with the class this quarter.

When posting your answers and responses in the discussion thread, you may see some additional follow up questions as a reply from me. I like to post critical thinking questions in the thread to provide you an