

Actions Taken by a Researcher

Explain the Benefits of the Study

A researcher should provide his or her name to a participant and explain the purpose as well as the benefits of the research.

Explain the Rights and Protection

A researcher should not deceive a participant but should explain to the participant his or her rights and how the participant will be protected.

Obtain the Informed Consent of Each Participant

A researcher should disclose to a participant the procedures that will be followed in the potential survey.

Debrief the Participant

A researcher should share the results of the research with a participant after the study is completed.

Realize the Importance of Privacy

A researcher should protect a participant's privacy.