

percent of environmental knowledge will move to the next stage and those who will exhibit less than twenty percent of knowledge will be eliminated from the contest and will be given a certificate of participation.

What about all those at 21-79%
?

In the endurance stage, the twenty will be paired, to form five groups. The groups will then be required to walk for seven days and seven nights across a desert, each group equipped only with two liters of water and a box of biscuits, taking different but equally dangerous routes to get to the same destination. Contestants will be required to reach the destination as a pair and the first two pairs will proceed to the next stage. The rest will be eliminated and they will take with them two years of health and a year's lesson of quality living lessons.

In humanity stage the contestants will be required to preach on the busy streets of the four biggest cities of the world. Each of the four remaining contestants will be required to accumulate the most followers of their own made Ideology of a better Universe. No translator will be given and each contestant will be taken to a City ^{where?} which their language of communication is parallel to that of the contestant. This will be to bring out the human character of the individual. The two contestants with the most followers will proceed to the next stage.

In the final stage, the two contestants will undergo screening to get to know which of them has lived a more quality life than the other since birth. This will be done by playing the individuals' life time films. The one with a better quality life in terms of virtues of life will be crowned "the better universe ambassador".

by what criteria "better"?

Exam
C+

The game could be Antennas, but should be more clearly so; but the prize you receive is really against her nature