

Meshal Beloushi

Elizabeth Saur

Eng. 101

21th January 2013

He Was ^a Soccer Player

Soccer has always been an integral part of his life. Once he tried to remember a single day totally away from the pitch, either indoor or outdoor, and he could not. It seemed to him that he had started playing soccer the day he was born. This unpretentious sports game became his hobby, favorite pastime, obsession, and almost the meaning of all his life. The people who know him have always been amazed at how strong the passion can be.

He was a common schoolboy who liked History and Math and longed for breaks and holidays. However, there has always been one thing that made him different from the children of his age. That was his absolute love of soccer. Everybody knew him as a boy with a football. He tried to spend every spare minute practicing and playing. He enjoyed watching matches on TV and could spend hours listening to his dad who knew hundreds of stories about famous soccer players from different countries. Both of them were always looking forward to the weekends when they could play in the yard and feel how close they were to each other.

When he was only ¹⁰ Ten years old, he was offered to play for Al-Arabi soccer team in Kuwait. It was the greatest happiness he could fancy. Besides, it was a source of pride for him and his parents. The selection of players at the national level was known to be very strict, but he was accepted without any objection. Very early, he had to realize that soccer is not only fun and joy. It requires dedication and hard work.

He realized how demanding sport was. So, he was ready to improve his skills, learn something

Do you have any story to tell?

Nice start overall

Nice details here - strong with overall

Strong discussion here

maybe describe yourself a bit?

Soccer

describe

Good - maybe describe this a bit more