✓ On the other hand, there are still various nations in the world who not just have so called independent countries but also they tend to preach about the different sort of freedoms. But when you look at countries like Algeria, Zimbabwe and many other rural countries in Africa and Asia, the situation is totally opposite. We are in twenty first century, it is so far the most advance time we have seen in many way. However, a large part of our planet is still not just rural and living under worst possible conditions but they don't have any freedom to do anything. It is from freedom to speech to freedom of religion. The question we should ask ourselves is that if freedom is actually a very good concept that only very few of us are enjoying it at the best and rest of world is still going through life in a different way (Beetham 12). I also want to shed some light on the freedom of religion, after democracy and a country being an independent nation. This is one of the most type or degree of freedom, because there are currently thousands of different types of religion being practiced in the World. In countries like USA or UK, according to a recent survey, there are more than 100 religion being practiced just in New York and London. If these countries and their governments have not given full fledge freedom to their citizen, I don't see that freedom of religion would have been possible (Carr 139).

There are many different examples at front of us from many different countries, but I would like to point out a very unorthodox example from a small country Romania. Traer points out that population is primarily Romanian and Eastern Orthodox. Here the minority community of Hungarian origin is under hostile to preserve its traditional and spiritual life. In this case minorities have protested and tried their best to get same rights as everyone else. It
