

has been more than two decades since this is being happening in Romania and they still have not given full rights or freedom of religion to Hungarians (2).

However, on this exact argument I would also like to point out one other thing that, yes freedom and more specifically freedom of religion is very important. Everyone should be allowed to practice their belief freely. But, most of the terror and other crime activities are also being done one the name of religion. Now this is something we as human being and our governments will have to work on. There are always individuals among us who take advantage of freedom. It is not just our government but also our responsibility not to misuse the freedom given to us (Sullivan 487). weak integration.

To conclude, I would like to start by saying that, yes any kind of freedom is a good thing to have in our society and we have developed many different degrees of freedom in past few decades. This intense development in technology and mass media to be everywhere at any given time has made sure that there is freedom of speech in most developed and even developing countries. As mention above in the essay most countries in the world are not just following the democracy examples set by nations like US, but they are making them more and more common everywhere. However, there is one thing which we should be very careful about it is the fact that yes we do have freedom, freedom of religion and speech. We should not misuse this power. In an essence freedom is nothing but a power and when some of us start looking at this remarkable concept as something like a power play. This is where problem comes and this is when we start to think that do we actually need this freedom in that part of the world. A simple example comes to mind which was of a Danish journalist creating awful cartoons of a Holy Prophet. We need to make sure that having this much freedom doesn't lead to an incident like that again.
