

It is not enough for your thesis statement to simply agree with the

character. what are the larger themes or ideas in the story that the character of the mother reveals to readers? your research suggests that you are going to write about what what kings' story tells us about Aboriginality.

Be more specific... how does the act? what does she believe?

Thesis statement: agree with the action and the reflection of the mother on the America-Canada borders.
Argument: the new generation, the mother's grandson, can accept the American identity as his own identity and her daughter have integrated into American society as a American identity.

What is "American identity"?

Work Cited

(Background) Wood, Patricia K. "Aboriginal/Indigenous Citizenship: An Introduction." Citizenship Studies 7.4 (2003): 371. Academic Search Complete. Web. 23 Oct. 2014.

Wood demonstrates a very academic article on the Aboriginal Citizenship to describe their society status of indigenous people, the political for indigenous people and so on. Importantly, Wood give a idea of how Aboriginal voices that have been among the most insistent in the calls to reconstitute the social and political contracts that frame modern democracies.

(Body) BLACKBURN, Carole [b1] (analytic). "Differentiating Indigenous Citizenship: Seeking Multiplicity In Right, Identity, And Sovereignty In Canada (English)." American Ethnologist 36.1 (0001): 66-78. FRANCIS. Web. 23 Oct. 2014

Nisga'a illustrates his idea of what the indigenous citizenship is and the way of how to approach the 'Citizen' he wants as a indigenous. Nisga'a is also looking for the significance of the relationship between their rights and territory. In this respect, Nisga'a extend the meaning and understanding on their rights and identity, which is also linked with globalization and contemporary neoliberalism that is for their free on indigenous identity.

(Body) (I'm still searching for a article that describe how and why Aboriginal people pay so much attention to their identity, I have an article but its not so many source that I can use in my essay.)

Perhaps this should be part of your thesis statement and argument, too.

concept

Citizenship

Aboriginality

us about

story tells

what kings'

about what

to write

are going

that you

suggests

research

your

readers?

reveals to

mother

of the

character

that the

story

in the

or ideas

themes

the larger

character. what are

It is not enough for your thesis statement to simply agree with the

character. what are the larger themes or ideas in the story that the character of the mother reveals to readers? your research suggests that you are going to write about what King's story tells us about Aboriginality.

Thesis statement: agree with the action and the reflection of the mother on the America-Canada borders.

Argument: the new generation, the mother's grandson, can accept the American identity as his own identity and her daughter have integrated into American society as a American identity.

What is "American identity"?

Work Cited

(Background) Wood, Patricia K. "Aboriginal/Indigenous Citizenship: An Introduction." Citizenship Studies 7.4 (2003): 371. Academic Search Complete. Web. 23 Oct. 2014.

Wood demonstrates a very academic article on the Aboriginal Citizenship to describe their society status of indigenous people, the political for indigenous people and so on. Importantly, Wood give a idea of how Aboriginal voices that have been among the most insistent in the calls to reconstitute the social and political contracts that frame modern democracies.

(Body) BLACKBURN, Carole [b1] (analytic). "Differentiating Indigenous Citizenship: Seeking Multiplicity In Right, Identity, And Sovereignty In Canada (English)." American Ethnologist 36.1 (0001): 66-78. FRANCIS. Web. 23 Oct. 2014

Nisga'a illustrates his idea of what the indigenous citizenship is and the way of how to approach the 'Citizen' he wants as a indigenous. Nisga'a is also looking for the significance of the relationship between their rights and territory. In this respect, Nisga'a extend the meaning and understanding on their rights and identity, which is also linked with globalization and contemporary neoliberalism that is for their free on indigenous identity.

(Body) (I'm still searching for a article that describe how and why Aboriginal people pay so much attention to their identity, I have an article but its not so many source that I can use in my essay.)

Perhaps this should be part of your thesis statement and argument, too.

concept

Citizenship

Aboriginality

us about

story tells

what King's

about what

to write

are going

that you

suggests

research

your

readers?

reveals to

mother

of the

character

that the

story

in the

or ideas

themes

the larger

character. what are