

a huge part in the communication and the connection between the areas in Asia starting from China which got the disease transmitted to, and through the Silk road it got all over Asia. The trading and the economy between the Eurasian world during the 14th century was the main reason ~~and the~~ which carried the disease all over the European world. Through land, the Silk road got the disease transferred from China to Persia and Russia which were connected to Europe, and through out trading it got transmitted to Europe. Also by the sea the ships were used to trade goods and by traveling from Asia to Europe the disease got carried on from one side to another. Then it comes the beginning of the disease in Italy which it first appeared, and through the clock wise movement by traveling either by humans or animals and also the trading in Europe the black death got to all over Europe and killed a huge population.