

Forbes
Increased support for and promotion of public transit could do much more to reduce our dependence on imported oil than support for domestic drilling (which will only make us more dependent on imported oil in the future by using up domestic resources sooner) while also creating jobs.

Meanwhile, energy efficiency programs such as cash for caulkers can cost-effectively reduce energy bills and free up money for other sorts of consumption while also creating jobs in the depressed housing sector.

(<http://www.forbes.com/sites/tomkonrad/2011/09/28/the-microeconomics-of-green-jobs/2/>) Page 3 / 3 $459

Comment Now Follow Comments

Promoted Stories

- 1.  Transferring Your Credit Card Balance Every 15 Months Is a Brilliant Idea a month ago nextadvisor.com Next Advisor Next Advisor (sponsored)

- 2. Forget the iPhone 7. Next Apple Sensation Revealed 3 weeks ago fool.com The Motley Fool Fool.com (sponsored)
- 3.