

Many employers are finding their employees are spending time online instead of working. Employees don't think anything of it. This slows down productivity. Some organizations block certain sites from their employees which may lead to internal conflicts within the workplace.

Please answer the following questions in a report form.

- Is this situation a result of poor supervision?
- Do you feel that employees excuse their behavior because "everyone else is surfing"?
- Do you think that this is a reflection of our changes in society?
- What is the best way to resolve this situation?
- Do you find yourself on the internet for personal use?
