

A photograph may have deep depictive space but shallow space on the mental level — in which there is little sensation of your eye changing focus.