

education, a tool for the transformation of my neighborhood. To change the community, you have to change the composition of the soil.”

After that, Finley encourages more people to volunteer at the food forest to find new jobs. He is inspiring how he went to the homeless and to build a garden in his home with the help of some friends. And how he gave food to the hungry mother and her daughter. Some people say that it is hard to take care to 5 members in a family, But what Finley is doing he is taking care of the whole neighborhood. Which is hard and overwhelming to some people. To know each name in the family member, for most people is hard.

He also talks about how to let children appreciate growing vegetables, And he indicates that by letting them grow their own vegetables and taking care of it. and when children see that their parents are eating and growing vegetables, children will most likely do the same, Because they saw their parent doing that. Finley moves his audience saying “If (children) grow kale, (children will) eat kale. If they grow tomatoes, they (will) eat tomatoes, But then none of this is present to them. If they (are) not shown how food affects the mind and body, they blindly eat whatever () you put in front of them.”

He gets inspired when he sees kids with different color. Black African, Chinese, and Latin America. They are all helping and that makes him happy to see that everyone is putting their hands in the garden, Which is inspiring and motivated how all these people are helping each other to make this beautiful garden come true and to eat from it later. Finley says “growing your own food is like printing your own money” which is true and this is why Finley got his citation that he can not grow vegetables in this place.
